

With average life spans increasing, there are now five generations above the age of 21 in most societies today. Families are no longer passing the baton from one generation to the next, but rather, they are learning to run the race together. In this session, 21/64 Senior Consultant, Diane Higginbotham, will bring research and experience on multigenerational family philanthropy. Diane will also facilitate an interactive tool for attendees to practice leading these conversations and engaging all generations.
